INTEREST OF AMICUS CURIAE

The National Association of REALTORS[®] (“NAR”), the Baldwin County Association of REALTORS[®], the Greater Las Vegas Association of REALTORS[®], the Kansas City Regional Association of REALTORS[®], The Nevada Association of REALTORS[®], and The Tennessee REALTORS[®] have a considerable interest in the Final Rule.

NAR’s membership consists of primarily working owners, but also small and large business owners with employees, involved in all aspects of residential and commercial real estate sales transactions, all with varying health care concerns. Members have long struggled to find affordable health insurance coverage, where historically the rate of uninsured members has ranged between 20 and 30 percent. While some real estate professionals are able to obtain health insurance from a spouse, former employer, or government program, such as Medicare, many are purchasing health insurance on their own, through an exchange or with the help of a broker, in the individual insurance market.

Passage of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (“ACA”) resulted in significant regulatory changes to the individual insurance market (and the small group market), some of which have benefited REALTORS[®]. For example, with many real estate professionals falling in the baby boomer generation, maintaining protections for pre-existing conditions and ensuring guaranteed availability of coverage have been top priorities when considering health insurance options. However, ACA changes have also resulted in significant increases in health care costs, leaving many individuals to forego coverage, which jeopardizes the health, safety, and financial stability of their families and others.

NAR therefore supports the Department of Labor's ("DOL's") efforts to expand health insurance options through Association Health Plans ("AHPs"), which are typically ACA compliant, providing comprehensive, attractive, and cost-effective health insurance plans to those in need. The Final Rule brings new freedom to working owners across the country to choose from a variety of insurance providers offering quality coverage plans, which was not possible in the limited individual and small group insurance markets before the DOL expanded access to AHPs for working owners. Real estate professionals need access to quality and affordable health care coverage and the Final Rule has made this possible.

NAR has long championed efforts on behalf of America's real estate professional that promote access to AHPs and supports the DOL's actions today that make it possible for self-employed individuals and small employers to purchase health insurance through a professional or trade associations. The Final Rule has already resulted in positive financial savings and more importantly, better access to health care to improve well-being, for many real estate professionals and their families. The Court must act protect these benefits being enjoyed by so many and ensure that the expanded eligibility for working owners continues so that REALTORS® across the country have the flexibility and the freedom to choose a health insurance plan that best fits their needs.

Summary of Argument

ARGUMENT

I. The DOL Has the Authority To Supersede Its Prior Sub-Regulatory Guidance and Interpret ERISA’s Definition of Employer and Employee Through the Final Rule

A. The DOL Has the Authority To Supersede Its Prior Sub-Regulatory Guidance Through the Final Rule

The Final Rule provision permitting working owners to participate in an ERISA-covered AHP supersedes prior Departmental sub-regulatory guidance (i.e., DOL Advisory Opinions) to the contrary. DOL Advisory Opinions serve as interpretive rules. [See DOL Adv. Op. Procedure 76-1].¹ The Supreme Court has explained that “[T]he critical feature of interpretive rules is that they are issued by an agency to advise the public of the agency’s construction of the statutes and rules which it administers.” [See Perez v. Mortgage Bankers Ass’n, 135 S. Ct. 1199 (2015) (quoting Shalala v. Guernsey Memorial Hospital, 514 U.S. 87, 99 (1995))]. The Supreme Court has also held that a Federal agency has the authority to modify its interpretive rules. Specifically, the Supreme Court explained that a Federal agency has the authority to issue a new interpretation of a regulation [or statute] that deviates significantly from one the agency has previously adopted. [Perez, 135 S. Ct. at 1203].

The Supreme Court has further held that an agency need not use notice-and-comment procedures under the Administrative Procedures Act (“APA”) when it wishes to issue a new interpretation that deviates from one the agency has previously adopted. [Id.]. Nevertheless, the DOL did use the APA’s notice-and-comment process when it modified its sub-regulatory guidance to allow “working owners” (i.e., self-employed individuals with no employees) to participate in an AHP, issuing proposed regulations (on January 5, 2018), accepting comments during a public comment period (which ended on March 6, 2018),² and finalizing those regulations (on June 21, 2018).

B. There Is a Sound Basis for the DOL To Interpret ERISA As Allowing a Working Owner To Act as an Employer and Employee

The DOL’s modified interpretation that a working owner may permissibly participate in an AHP is grounded in the Department’s previous sub-regulatory guidance relating to working owners. Specifically, in 1999, the DOL issued Advisory Opinion 99-04, concluding that a working owner may have dual status as an employer and an employee, and thus, permissibly be considered a “participant” in an ERISA-covered plan. [See DOL Adv. Op. 99-04A (Feb. 4, 1999); see also DOL

² The Department of Labor (“DOL”) accepted approximately 900 comments during the public comment period.

Adv. Op. 2006-04A (April 27, 2006)]. This conclusion was based on the DOL’s opinion that ERISA section 402(a)(2), ERISA section 403(b)(3)(A), ERISA section 408, ERISA section 4001(b)(1), ERISA section 4021(b)(9), and ERISA section 4022(b)(5)(A) all serve as an indication that working owners may be considered participants for purposes of ERISA coverage. This opinion led the DOL to state that “there is a clear Congressional design to include working owners within the definition of participant for purposes of Title I of ERISA.” [Id.].

While the facts in Advisory Opinion 99-04 dealt with a working owner who had initially participated in an ERISA-covered plan as an employee of an employer, this Advisory Opinion – and the sections of ERISA cited by the DOL – are examples where the DOL has sought to apply a more flexible standard to address a practical problem. Such a flexible interpretation illustrates that ERISA’s definitions of “employer” and “participant” are not rigid, rather these definitions are meant to be interpreted such that practical issues can be resolved so individuals can have access to workplace benefits.

In the case of the Final Rule, it is the DOL’s interpretation that a working owner with no employees has dual status as employer and employee for purposes of participating in an AHP. This interpretation is consistent with the flexible approach the DOL has taken when seeking to give individuals access to workplace benefits. Moreover, such an interpretation is consistent with the DOL’s long-held position that working owners should be able to participate in an ERISA-covered plan. The Final Rule reasonably provides this flexibility in the narrow context of allowing a working owner without employees to access quality and affordable health coverage through an AHP.

1. The DOL Has the Authority To Deem Working Owners With No Employees Eligible to Participate In an ERISA-Covered AHP

DOL regulation section 2510.3-3 does not reflect an interpretation that ERISA prohibits working owners from participating in an ERISA-covered plan. The regulation simply makes clear that working owners with no employees are not required to undertake the burdens of complying with, for example, ERISA's reporting and fiduciary requirements. More specifically, through DOL regulation section 2510.3-3, the Department deems a working owner a participant of a non-ERISA-covered plan because ERISA's traditional reporting and fiduciary requirements are unnecessary in this narrow circumstance.

The regulation, however, makes clear that in cases where a working owner with no employees participates in an employee benefit plan alongside other employees, the working owner will be deemed an employee, and the plan will be governed by Title I of ERISA. This point was preceded by the DOL's long, and ultimately successful struggle to convince the courts that ERISA was not intended to exclude working owners with employees from the ERISA-covered plans the owner established for its employees. This led the Supreme Court to conclude that "a working owner can be an employee entitled to participate in a plan and, at the same time, the employer who established the plan.” [See Yates v. Hendon, 540 U.S. 1, 16 (2004)].

In the context of an AHP – and a “bona fide group or association of employers” sponsoring the AHP – a working owner with no employees will typically participate in the AHP alongside other employees. More specifically, the types of member-based organizations that qualify as a “bona fide group or association of employers” typically include both employer members and working owner members with no employees (i.e., these member-based organizations are typically not made up of working owners without employees only). For these “bona fide groups” sponsoring an AHP, their working owner members with no employees will be participating in the AHP alongside other employees employed by the group’s employer members.

There may be rare instances where the only members of a “bona fide group” – and thus the only participants in an AHP sponsored by this “bona fide group” – are working owners with no employees. But, the tail should not wag the dog; rare instances should not transform a reasonable statutory interpretation to an unreasonable one, as the district court concludes.

The final AHP regulations also provide, for the first time, clear guidance over one area of uncertainty for working owners with employees who are participants of an ERISA-covered plan: What happens when there are fluctuations in the number of employees employed by the working owner? For instance, does ERISA coverage suddenly cease when the working owner's employees cease their employment, leaving only the working owner and his or her spouse? For any AHP that provides coverage to small employers and working owners with employees, such fluctuations are bound to occur, and now, the Final Rule provides a clear path to remaining in ERISA compliance. Again, the DOL has adopted a flexible standard to address a practical problem.

2. The Ability of a Working Owner With No Employees to Participate In an ERISA-Covered AHP Does Not Produce an Absurd Result Under the ACA

The district court states that the “DOL contends that an ERISA bona fide association comprised solely of two working owners without employees would qualify as both an employer and an employee under the ACA.” [Mem. Op. 40]. This is not what that the DOL contends. A working owner without employees is not considered both an employer and an employee under the ACA. Rather, a working owner without employees is considered both an employer and an employee under ERISA.

Pursuant to the Final Rule, a working owner with no employees is considered an employer member of the “ERISA bona fide association.” And, it is the “bona fide association” that stands as the “employer” under the ACA. A working owner with no employees is never incorporated into the ACA as an employer because a working owner with no employees is not considered an employer under ERISA section 3(5).

An “ERISA bona fide association,” on the other hand, is considered an employer under ERISA section 3(5) because the “bona fide association” qualifies as “a group or association of employers [that acts] indirectly in the interest of an employer.” As an ERISA section 3(5) employer, the “ERISA bona fide association” is incorporated into the ACA by reference under Public Health Service Act (“PHSA”) section 2791(d)(6).

It is important to emphasize that the previous Administration has interpreted ERISA and the PHSA as working hand-in-hand from a definitional perspective. [See CMS Insurance Standards Bulletin, September 1, 2011]. And, according to that Administration, in cases where an “ERISA bona fide association” is sponsoring a group health plan (i.e., an AHP), the number of employees employed by all of the employers members of the “ERISA bona fide association” determines whether the coverage is subject to the small group market or the large group market rules. [Id.]. In other words, the Administration explained that in cases where an “ERISA bona fide association” stands as an employer under ERISA section 3(5), employees employed by all of the employer members of the “ERISA bona fide association” are aggregated for purposes of determining whether the AHP sponsored by the “bona fide association” is a small group market or large group market plan.

As an “employee” of the “bona fide association,” as called for under the Final Rule (and consistent with the DOL’s long-held recognition that a working owner may be considered an employer and employee for ERISA purposes), a working owner under the Final Rule will be aggregated with all of the other employees of the employer members of the “bona fide association,” as called for by the prior Administration in the September 1, 2011 CMS Insurance Standards Bulletin. That means that the “ERISA bona fide association” – and not the working owner – stands as an “employer of two or more employees” as required under the ACA.

II. The DOL Final Rule is Good Public Policy That Does Not Conflict With Existing Law and Provides Flexibility For An Evolving Workforce

A. An Employment Relationship Remains Even for Working Owners With No Employees

The district court suggests that working owners with no employees fall “outside any employment relationship.” [Mem. Op. at 19 - 20]. The district court further states that “[a]s a practical matter, one does not have an employment relationship with oneself.” [Mem. Op. at 35]. A working owner with no employees provides services to the working owner’s own trade or business, which in turn provides services to a third-party entity, which itself is traditionally a trade or business or a third-party consumer. This working owner generates revenue for his or her own trade or business through the provision of these services for these third-parties, and the Internal Revenue Code treats this revenue generated as “income,” which is taxed for both income and employment tax purposes, similar to “wages.”

Over the past three decades, the nation’s economy has evolved into a competitive, global economy. Our nation’s workforce has similarly evolved from a traditional employment-based setting where “employees are employed by an employer,” to a non-traditional employment-based setting where a growing number of workers are self-employed individuals with no employees (i.e., “working owners”). [See Key Trends at Sole Proprietorships Over the Past 30 Years, Small Business Trends, Dec. 4, 2015 at].³ It does not follow that this evolution from a traditional employment setting to a non-traditional employment setting extinguishes any employment relationship, as the district court suggests.

More specifically, while these working owners with no employees do not act in the capacity of employees of an employer in the traditional sense, these working owners continue to provide services just like an employee, and these working owners generate income that is taxed just like wages. A failure to recognize that these revenue-generating, taxpaying working owners operate in an employment setting is a failure to recognize that we now live in a competitive, global economy that no longer relies on a workforce made up of the traditional employee employed by a traditional employer.

Recognizing these changing market dynamics, the DOL has sought to develop a flexible rule to promote sound public policy that would permit a working owner to access workplace benefits. Again, such an interpretation is consistent with the DOL’s long-held position that working owners should be able to participate in an ERISA-covered plan. And, the Final Rule is reasonable because it limits this interpretation to the narrow context of health coverage offered through an AHP.

A. Deeming Working Owner With No Employees Eligible to Participate In an ERISA-Covered AHP Is Reasonable In Light of Changing Market Dynamics and an Enhanced Regulatory Environment

In our view, the DOL properly exercised its broad authority to interpret the provisions of ERISA, in light of changing times and circumstances, which is permissible according to the Supreme Court. Specifically, the Supreme Court explained that a Federal agency can supersede a prior interpretation to address marketplace developments and new policy and regulatory issues. [Perez, 135 S. Ct. at 1203].

The primary factors that the DOL has always used in the context of AHPs – “bona fide,” “commonality,” “control,” “substantial business purpose,” and “genuine organizational relationship” – are themselves sub-regulatory, and are substantially retained in the Final Rule, but updated to reflect changing industry patterns and a wholly different enforcement landscape. For example, the “substantial business” test was utilized during a time of perceived need to curb abuses involving putative multiple employer welfare arrangements (“MEWAs”). At that time, there was no indication that Congress intended such a test when it included employer groups and associations in the definition of “employer.” Even if it was appropriate years ago, it might even be reasonable to suggest that there is currently no compelling need to require any “other” purpose at all. That is, the employer’s interest in providing benefits to its employees is compelling enough, and the new emphasis on the control test clarifies that the obligation placed on each employer participant in an AHP is a serious commitment, providing alternative indicia of legitimate purpose.

When the above-stated terms were first articulated, the States were just starting to curb abuses in the area of MEWAs by commercial insurance-type arrangements as permitted by ERISA's MEWA provision, which gives States broad authority to regulate self-insured MEWAs and to regulate the contribution and reserve levels of fully-insured MEWAs. [See ERISA section 514(b)(6)]. The DOL itself, through sub-regulatory guidance and new enforcement regulations and programs, built and maintains robust enforcement activities, aided by Congress's specifically requiring AHPs to file annually with the DOL a public form that includes specific plan-related information. [See DOL Form M-1]. Congress further augmented the DOL's enforcement authority through the ACA by allowing the DOL to impose civil and new criminal penalties, and the ACA now allows the DOL to stop an AHP's operations or seize its assets in certain circumstances without a court order. [See ACA sections 6601 and 6605].

III. Real Estate Professionals Deserve Access to Quality and Affordable Health Care Coverage Through AHPs

Real estate professionals provide services to their own trade or business, which in turn provides services to a third-party. In the case of real estate professionals, the third-party is not always a trade or business, but rather is a third-party consumer (i.e., an individual, or a family, or a business looking for corporate space). Through the time and energy devoted to the property transaction, however, real estate professionals generate revenue for their own trade or business, which is taxed for both income and employment tax purposes, similar to wages. Real estate professionals often times cycle between roles as a working owner with no employees, as a working owner with employees, and/or a traditional employee of a traditional employer. It is this flexibility and associated benefits that attracts many individuals to the real estate profession, which should not result in reduced or less attractive health insurance options.

Real estate professionals with or without employees struggle to find quality and affordable health coverage for themselves and their families. For example, according to the Kaiser Family Foundation, the average increase in the lowest-cost premium in the individual market ranged between 17 and 32 percent for 2018. [See How Premiums Are Changing In 2018, Kaiser Family Foundation, Nov. 29, 2017 at <https://www.kff.org/health-costs/issue-brief/how-premiums-are-changing-in-2018/>].⁴

While individual market premiums moderated in many States in 2019, the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office (“CBO”) estimated that roughly 3.1 million people exited the “unsubsidized” individual market, due in large part to the sizeable premium increases between 2015 and 2018. [See Health Insurance Coverage for People Under Age 65: Definitions and Estimates for 2015 to 2018, April 2019, Table 1 at https://www.cbo.gov/system/files/2019-04/55094-CoverageUnder65_0.pdf]. This is especially relevant in the context of realtors, as 70 percent of the 364,000 National Association REALTORS® members who were recently surveyed indicated that they did not qualify for a premium tax credit under the ACA. [See 2018 Health Insurance Survey, National Association of Realtors, July 20, 2018, slide 10 at <https://www.nar.realtor/sites/default/files/documents/2018-health-insurance-survey-10-05-2018.pdf>]. Premiums in the small group market also remain high and unpredictable for real estate professionals with employees or those who are employees of a small brokerage firm. For example, the cost of small group market plans are eight to 18 percent higher than large employer plans, depending on the State insurance market. [See Small and Large Business Health Insurance: State & Federal Roles, National Conference of State Legislatures, September 12, 2018 at <http://www.ncsl.org/research/health/small-business-health-insurance.aspx>].

Real estate professionals, like other working owners with and without employees, are the types of workers that the DOL has sought to provide access to affordable and quality workplace benefits. And, many real estate professionals are members of a member-based organization (either at the State and/or National level) that also includes employers with employees in addition to working owners with no employees. Thus, in the case of an AHP sponsored by the National Association of REALTORS® or a State-based REALTORS® Association, the AHP would likely provide health coverage to working owners with no employees as well as employers with at least one employee. In some cases, the AHP may cover only working owners with no employees. But, over a period of years, the AHP will typically cover both working owners with no employees as well as an employer with at least one employee, which is the type of AHP that the DOL envisioned when developing the Final Rule provision permitting working owners without employees to participate in an ERISA-covered AHP.

A. To Date, the State and Local-Based REALTORS® AHPs Formed In Accordance With the Final Rule Are Providing Comprehensive Coverage and Transforming People’s Lives

1. Comprehensive Coverage

To date, the following State and Local-based REALTORS® Associations have established an AHP: The Baldwin REALTORS® in Alabama, The Greater Las Vegas Association of REALTORS®, the Kansas City Regional Association of REALTORS® (KCRAR), the Nevada Association of REALTORS®, and the Tennessee REALTORS®. All of these AHPs are fully-insured.

The Baldwin REALTORS® AHP covers all ten (10) of the ACA’s “essential health benefits” (“EHBs”), while The Greater Las Vegas Association, Kansas City Regional Association, Nevada Association, and Tennessee REALTORS® AHPs cover all of the EHBs, except pediatric dental and vision. The reason some of these AHPs do not cover pediatric dental and/or vision is that it is more cost-effective to provide coverage for these services through a stand-alone product. And, coverage is traditionally more comprehensive under these stand-alone products.

Participants in the Kansas City Regional Association of REALTORS® AHP averaged savings between 5 percent and 50 percent, while participants in the Tennessee REALTORS® AHP experienced 25 to 50 percent savings. The Nevada Association REALTORS® AHP participants saw savings from two percent up to 32.5 percent, while participants in the Baldwin County REALTORS® AHP realized savings ranging from $150 to $15,000 per year.

Importantly, the Baldwin, Greater Las Vegas, Kansas City Regional, and Tennessee REALTORS® cover working owners as well as employers with employees under their AHPs.

2. AHPs Transform People's Lives

For purposes of developing this Brief, we asked the current participants of the State and Local-based REALTORS® AHPs the following questions: (1) If the AHP health coverage goes away on account of the district court ruling, how would it affect you? and (2) Please share a short story about how your AHP has helped you and your family?

A respondent from The Baldwin REALTORS® AHP explained, “If our AHP coverage goes away, it would cost more money for health insurance and I would be less likely to use it due to higher deductibles and co-pays. What I have through the AHP is better coverage at a better price.” Another Baldwin AHP participants stated, “I would have to pay $450 more for a ‘silver’ plan instead of the ‘gold plan’ I have now.” In response to the second question, a Baldwin AHP participant also explained, “I’ve been struggling with some chronic health issues but have been unable to afford to go to a specialist and pay for the tests. I work two jobs, and I am a caregiver to a 94-year-old woman. Even with two jobs, I could not afford useful insurance on my own without this AHP. With this insurance, I’ve made some appointments and look forward to seeing what I can do to slow down the progression of the health issues I struggle with (Fibromyalgia and inflammatory arthritis).”

The Greater Las Vegas Association of REALTORS® reported that for real estate professionals between ages 55 to 64, they experienced lower overall premiums, richer overall benefits, and access to a broader network. The savings in premiums for this age cohort averaged 11 percent, and out-pocket savings average 12 percent. Additionally, thanks to increased education on health savings accounts tied to the AHP options, enrollees in those plans will save $3,600.00 annually.

A REALTOR® in the Kansas City AHP reported that as a newly self-employed individual, with a wife who recently retired, “[f]inding a long term plan had been more difficult than I imagined...We have been making do with short term plans, but not comfortable with the limited coverage...The KCRAR Blue Cross plan has solved our health insurance problem.” Another AHP participant discussed the limited marketplace options available in Kansas City and how the AHP offered by KCRAR enables the freedom to continue being a real estate professional. “This policy through KCRAR gives me the ability to step away from the uncertainty of the Marketplace. The phenomenal work you have done to add major medical insurance for agents allows me to continue ... without a worry ... my incredible career.”

The Tennessee REALTORS® also explained that a number of their real estate professional members were previously enrolled in a non-ACA-compliant plan that did not cover pre-existing conditions. But, because the Tennessee REALTORS® AHP provides coverage for pre-existing conditions, these real estate agents gained access to the medical care that they needed. One real estate broker was especially thankful for being able to provide ACA compliant and affordable coverage to their employed staff, which was much more attractive when compared to what was available in the small group market. As health care costs in the state continued to rise, Tennessee REALTORS® searched for affordable health policies, which were sometimes only short-term plans, not designed for long-term coverage. Such coverage failed to ensure diseases or illnesses that happened outside of effective dates were paid for, prompting many individuals to seek more permanent, comprehensive solutions in the AHP.

Lastly, a participant from the Nevada REALTORS® AHP said this, “My wife and I are currently on the Nevada REALTORS® AHP health care plan and have saved about $500 per month from our previous Obamacare plan. My wife paid the penalty for four years and had no coverage until we got Obamacare last year. I am Diabetic so health coverage is not an option for me as I have many doctor visits and high prescription costs. When we got on the AHP this year, we upgraded our coverage and now have a deductible which is much lower and the overall coverage is much better. In other words, we went from the worst plan under Obamacare to the best plan under Hometown Health for Northern Nevada and still saved money on the monthly costs. In addition, we are also able to go to the best hospital in Northern Nevada as well as have a network of local providers that were not covered under our previous plan. As we live in a remote area at Lake Tahoe, we would normally have to drive an hour or more to go to preferred providers under the previous Obamacare plan and now we can use local providers.”

These are just a few of the countless examples of real estate professionals appreciation for the new health insurance options afforded to them through an AHP. Such success stories have encouraged many other state and local REALTOR® associations to also explore implementation of AHPs in their areas but have been put on hold due to the uncertainty of the ongoing litigation, leaving working owners across the country with limited and unaffordable insurance options.

CONCLUSION

This Court should overturn the district court's finding that provisions of the Final Rule, codified at 29 C.F.R. §§ 2510.3-5(b), (c) and (e), were unreasonable.
