

Self-employed Americans across the country are asking for affordable health care...
over a million of them are REALTORS®

Unlike many in the work force who have an employer to help offset their health insurance costs, the self-employed do not. They pay the full amount of their health insurance coverage. These entrepreneurs are vital to a healthy economy and to our communities. They deserve access to a health care plan they can afford.

Congress: As the health reform debate moves forward, don't forget the self-employed.
